Q+A Your Questions Answered:

Q: Dear Sherie & Keri, I am single and dating different men. I wondered the importance of treatments like Botox or Fotofacials. Shouldn't a man like me for me, just the way I am?
Rachael

A: Dear Rachael, You ask an important question. As a single woman myself, I have contemplated a variety of treatments to enhance the quality of my looks. In the end, it is a very personal choice.

Some women consider the treatments they choose as basic maintenance whether they are in a relationship or not.

While others have been extremely cautious, sticking with more traditional facials and a quality skin care regiment. What I want you to know is that men are, in fact, attracted to what they see.

(This shouldn't be new information for you) This means that if you are single and dating, you want to dress it up a bit, even when going to the market. Wear lip gloss, opt for something more feminine when getting dressed, and be happy, open and easy to approach. Yes, a man should like you for who you are, just keep in mind that the initial attraction is visual. Another interesting thing to consider is that most women need to feel good to do good. If you think something might make you feel good (as long as it's legal)- go for it! I have tried a few different facial treatments and find that they have not only made my skin look better, but make me feel on top of my game!!

Keri Newell

Keri Newell is a gifted speaker, teacher and personal coach. Her passion is helping people create the relationship of their dreams.

It all started when she was a teenager, fascinated with the mystery of dating.

After years of research, and studied observation, she realized that understanding male/female differences was transforming her relationships with all the men in her life.

For over 15 years she has shared her expertise, guiding participants to fulfilling and fun relationships. In 2002 Keri began co-teaching seminars for men and women for Can't Love Without It, a company created by her mother, Dr. Sherie Zander. Together this mother/daughter team is bringing fresh insights to the mysterious world of relationship dynamics.

Keri has also created Can't Date Without It, offering dating and flirting seminars and one-on-one coaching. Her direct approach and fun-loving manner have allowed her to succeed as a dating and relationship expert.

Dr. Sherie Zander

We all want a great, loving relationship, yet, statistics show that very few have one.

What keeps us from it?

Dr. Sherie believes that our failure to be aware of our many male/female differences is the major cause of frustration, irritation, anger, and hurt that characterize most relationships. Believing that we share the same reality will set us up to fail. Learning about our differences will set us free to love, appreciate, respect and enjoy each other. Dr. Sherie gives relationship advice and couple counseling.

Can't Love Without It provides life changing information about the nature and needs of men and women and practical tools for relating that really do work! Finally you will be able to express the love and caring you have in a way that will be received and understood. You will discover how to create
